The Great North American Shale Revolution

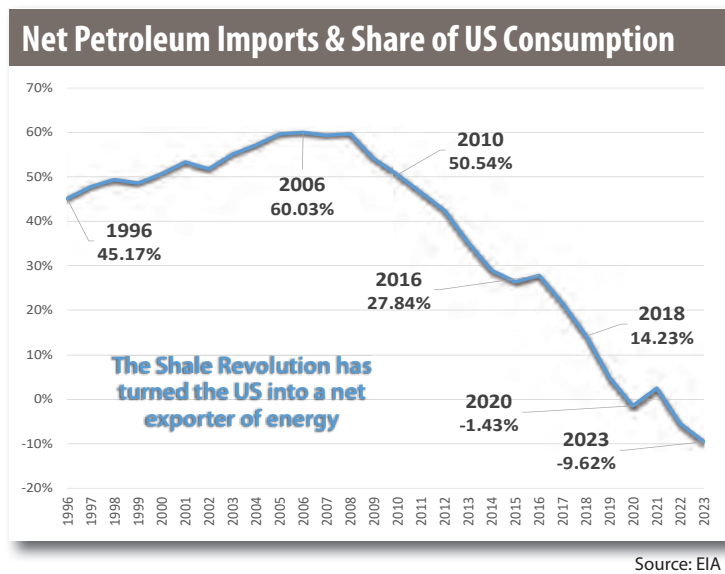

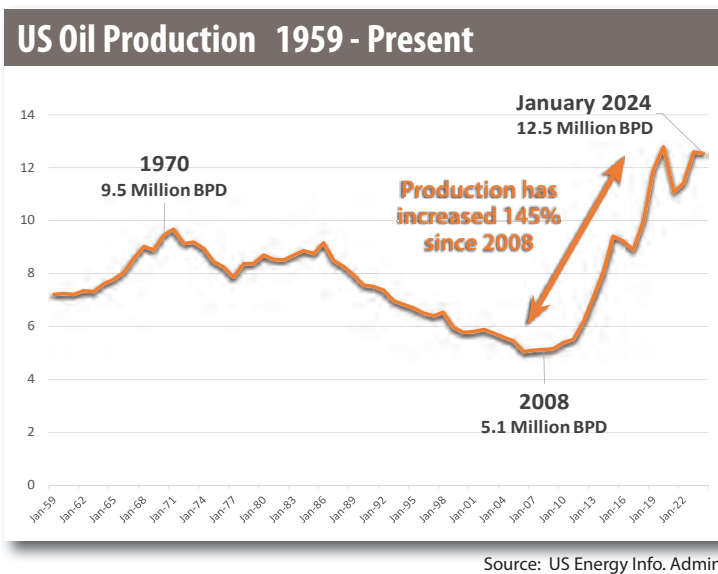

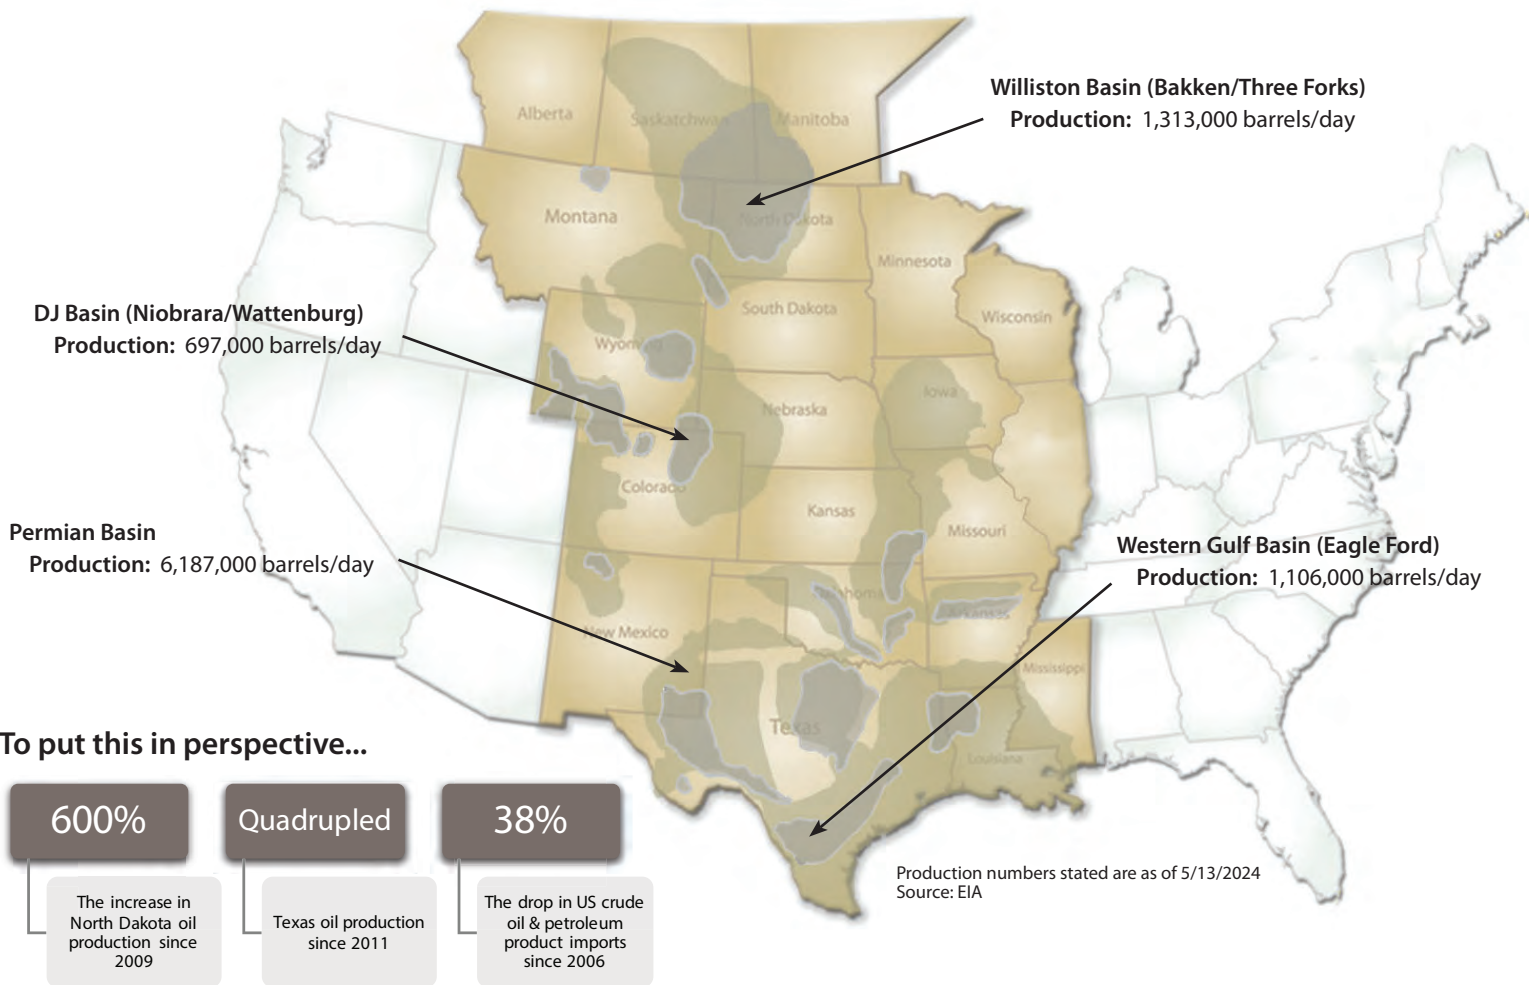

Energy sector growth in North America has largely been driven by increased domestic production from shale formations. The increased production has been a direct result of innovative techniques in drilling.

Many shale formations are located outside traditional production basins which has led to significant new infrastructure needs. Major investments have been made in transportation and infrastructure including: rail cars, rail terminals, pipelines, natural gas processing plants, and refinery expansions, to name a few. All of this is leading many to coin the term: 'Shale Revolution' to describe the landscape of U.S. energy.

Integrity Viking Funds' Integrity Mid-North American Resources Fund gives investors an opportunity to be a part of the activities in the North American Shale Revolution.
